

MONICA BOCK

ARTIST STATEMENT

Objects evolve and recombine in my thematic exhibitions and site-specific installations. Pursuing personal and rhetorical associations often triggered or resolved by text, I expose lines of thought through material transformation of familiar forms. Altered castings of organic bodies and found objects become meaningful things arranged across walls and floors. I use ephemeral substances such as salt and soap, as well as apparently durable materials such as porcelain and iron. I've cast kitchen chairs, lunch bags, children's teeth, and lately, dead birds. Noticing dynamics of kinship and community and informed by feminist perspectives on power and vulnerability, I engage narrative objects in particular places as points of entry into difficult questions about home.
